The Joy in Worship and Music

Excerpted from Bishop Kochendorfer’s presentation of Dr. Joy Berg as one of the 2014 Laureates for the Companion of the Worship Arts, The Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada – July 22, 2014 – Edmonton.

In speaking about Dr. Joy Berg I could share at length of her service to congregations, our synod, the national expression of the church, the Lutheran World Federation and the ecumenical community: her service as Lutheran co-chair of the 2014 National Anglican Lutheran Worship Conference – or of her efforts in co-ordinating Concordia University Edmonton’s annual Worship and Music Symposium – or that she was the Canadian representative for the development of the hymnal for the Lutheran World Federation Assembly in Winnipeg in 2003.

I could convey that Dr. Berg presented at the Hymn Society; or that arising out of recent sabbatical time in Europe meeting and shadowing church musicians, she presented her learnings with: Telling God’s Story around the World: a Look at How the Congregation Sings; or that she leads workshops across denominations on sacred music with an emphasis on Canadian hymnody.

I might consider communicating that she is past president of Region 4 of the Association of Lutheran Church Musicians; that she has served as ELCIC National Convention Musician and is frequently the chief musician for Synod conventions; that she has served on the ELCIC Program Committee for Worship, the Synod Committee for Worship and the Arts, as a synodical trainer for the introduction of Evangelical Lutheran Worship and principle teacher in our Synod’s Leadership Program for Musicians.

If I were to share these things with you, you would certainly know that Dr. Berg is a worthy recipient of this award.

Indeed, she is highly regarded by her peers and members of the ecclesiastical community in Canada, the United States of America and Europe because of her level of expertise in the fields of choral conducting, sacred music and congregational song. She is: associate professor of music, program co-ordinator, director of choral activities, and chapel cantor at Concordia University in Edmonton. She is an accomplished conductor, pianist, organist, and active chorister with Edmonton’s professional choir, Pro Coro Canada.

But a list of achievements, participation, and leadership does not reveal the passion and gifts and time and “joy” which Joy brings to her calling:

- her passion, as a church musician, to support and lead congregational song.
- Joy’s unique and special ability in identifying, encouraging and supporting the

- strengths and gifts of others, and of ensuring the proper occasion for these gifts to be shared.
- Joy's continuing encouragement and support for worship planners, leaders and musicians.
 - her willingness, in fact, I believe her aspiration to mentor, to teach, to give.
 - the time and energy, and careful attention she gives to planning each liturgy, each hymn introduction, each postlude.
 - her modeling of a thoughtful and creative approach to communal worship that values the Lutheran and ecumenical heritage of worship.
 - her commitment to exploring with integrity new and innovative approaches to communal worship.
 - her collaborative approach: a generous team player and respected leader.
 - her incredible ability to integrate worship with lives given in service for others.
 - and all with great grace, humility, patience and – yes – “joy.”

It is through hymn – through song – through praise of God – that Joy is deeply rooted in the narrative of the Christian faith – of self-emptying love and humble service to others. She continues in this faithful service for the sake of those who gather to worship and seek to live faithfully as disciples committed to the Gospel of grace in Christ we proclaim.

Think Worship and Music with PEW: Practical Enrichment for Worship

Made possible through a Vital Worship Grant from the Calvin Institute of Christian Worship, Grand Rapids, Michigan, these symposium events are free and will be of interest to worship and music leaders – primarily the person playing the organ, piano or keyboard at your church. Each event, held in a different church, will also speak to the resources from that denomination (hymnals or other resources), as well as how these church musicians structure the music in their church and involve the musicians. Anyone interested in this conversation is welcome!

Companion Synod – the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Colombia

A second Synod Delegation to visit our Companion Synod, the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Colombia (IELCO) is being planned for August 4 – 18, 2015. The journey will include many opportunities to meet our Lutheran sisters and brothers in Christ and to experience a variety of ministry contexts in Colombia. We will explore stronger ties between partner congregations in our Synod and IELCO; participate in a shared hands on project as determined by IELCO; and seek an expanding global understanding of faithful discipleship through the Lutheran Colombian context. Further information, including an application form, is available by contacting the Synod office at 780-439-2636. Application deadline is December 31, 2014.

Lay Pastoral Assistant’s Course

We hire doctors to do our medical work and lawyers to do our legal work. Elected politicians do our political work. Don’t we hire pastors to do our religious or “churchly” work? This course, led by The Rev. Dr. Gordon Jensen (right), looks at how the whole people of God are called to be engaged in ministry in our world. “The Priesthood of All Believers” will be held January 31, 2015. Luther would be pleased.

Contact the Synod office at 780-439-2636 for location and registration information.

Ecumenical Action: National Worship Conference Special

In the Spirit of Full Communion

For the first time the Companion of the Worship Arts (CWA) Award was presented to two recipients – one each from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada (ELCIC) and the Anglican Church of Canada (ACC). Dr. Joy Berg (story and photo: Bishop's Report page 2) is the Lutheran laureate.

The Rev. Canon Dr. Graham Cotter (photo right) is the inaugural Anglican laureate of the CWA. The award, presented at the 2014 National Worship Conference in Edmonton, is in recognition of a lifetime of contributions by Canon Cotter to the worship life of the ACC in all its expressions. A lifelong student of religion and the arts and prolific writer, he is the producer of several liturgical dramas, an accomplished liturgical dancer, and has collaborated in the design and creation of a major altarpiece, vestments, and even labyrinths. He has dedicated much of his ministry to encouraging local worshipping communities to give expression to their faith through the arts.

In 1994 Canon Cotter and his late wife, Evelyn, donated the seed money for the Sacred Arts Trust, an endowment administered by the Anglican Foundation which continues to provide financial support for creative liturgical expression across Canada through worship and drama, liturgical dance, performing arts, music, and the visual arts. The Sacred Arts Trust has also helped support several National Worship Conferences.

Now retired, Canon Cotter lives near Warkworth, Ontario, and continues to serve as an honorary assistant priest at the parish of St. Mark, Port Hope.

National Worship Conference: Story Telling in Worship and Sermon

“The act of worship by a community is deeply enmeshed in the ways of story.” This statement, appearing on the National Worship Conference website, introduced the workshop presented by Rev. Dr. Sid Haugen, Bishop of the Synod of Saskatchewan, July 21 in Edmonton. Rev. Kathy Calkins of Peace Lutheran, Innisfail (photo right) attended the workshop and responded with a story of her own.

The story we heard was of a father and a son ... of a boy who said, “Dad, you may as well be as dead to me. Give me my inheritance, so I can go and live my life without you.” It’s a story we all know, (maybe it’s our story too). We’ve heard it before, except that this time, the boy bought a shiny, bright red Camaro, and came home on the Greyhound, while his dad, in a plaid bathrobe and slippers ran down the driveway to meet him.

Then we heard another story about a father and a son. About a Bible Camp that had not yet come to be, about a poplar tree fallen across a road, and somewhere in the middle, the story became a memory. A memory of a man who missed his father, who knew he was loved, a man who yearned for that love long since passed away.

There was yet another story. I can’t remember it now. Because though the words were spoken, I heard not these words, but the unspoken ones. The ones that told of the journey of a man called to leave the home he loves – the home that had been his for 18 years. It was a story of leaving and grieving. Would he remember who he was now, could he be who he was not yet?

Was there one more story still? One that ran beneath, between, intricately woven, forming and informing all the stories that were told? I think there was. And if there was, I think it would be this – that no matter where we find ourselves in the journey of life, there, too, God the Father will be running in a plaid bathrobe and slippers, running to embrace us, running to say, “Of course I love you. I will always love you. You are my son!”

Thank you Sid for inviting us into the power and vulnerability of story, of life, of life journeyed within the Father’s embrace.

Rebirth of Baptism at Glory Lutheran

On June 1, 2014, we celebrated the baptism of Will Ard in the beautiful creek that flows through our church property. Instead of a small bowl, we used a whole beaver pond of water. It flows naturally from the surrounding countryside through the meandering bed of Old Man Creek, which eventually drains into the North Saskatchewan River. Will's background is Baptist, he greatly appreciates God's creation, and was one of the first members of our church to discover the beauty of the Old Man Creek. In the winter, Will had started asking about the possibility of his baptism being held outdoors. I agreed, provided we wait until the ice has melted.

As we stepped into the cool water,
our feet sank into the mud.

As the congregation stood at water's edge under a cross made of aspen logs, we read the prayer from the Evangelical Lutheran Worship book that begins: "We give you thanks, O God, for in the beginning your spirit moved over the waters and by your Word you created the world, calling forth life in which you took delight." Hearing the water flow and the birds sing, feeling the sun and the breeze on our skin, aware of the newly sown fields around us, we could pray this prayer with new insight.

As Will, his sponsor, and I stepped into the cool water, our feet sank into the mud. It squished out between our toes, reminding us that we ourselves are made of the mud of the earth, enlivened by the breath of God. We felt connected to all of creation, the beavers, the ducks, the fish and the herons that call the creek their home. We also felt our connection to Jesus. Jesus himself was baptized in a natural body of water, the Jordan river. And like the birds that surrounded us at the creek, a dove descended on Jesus, signifying the Holy Spirit. I think Jesus smiled when he saw us step into the creek that day, invoking his name. God the creator laughed with us as we came out dripping

We ourselves are made of the mud of the earth ...

... and connected to

wet. And the Holy Spirit was surely present as the words of Scripture and the prayers were spoken.

As we welcomed Will into the mission we share as the body of Christ, “bearing God’s creative and redeeming word to all the world,” we felt immersed in God’s mission of redeeming all of creation from the powers that work against it, protecting the delicate balance, beauty and abundance of life that surrounds us.

As the congregation sang, prayed, laughed and cried under the open sky that day, it seemed as if for a moment not only the sky was open, but heaven itself.

From the Pew

We are accustomed to messages and stories being delivered from the pulpit. In this section of “Celebrations” you will read words belonging to people who sit in the pews. Over time, stories will be collected from churches throughout our Synod. They may tell of personal faith journeys or memorable experiences from the present or past – something uplifting, something funny or something sad. Here, Inez Bolstad of Grace, Wetaskiwin, Alberta tells us how she grew up ... and stayed in the church.

Inez Bolstad: “A Lifetime in the Church”

My relationship with God began when I was just over 9 weeks old, the day of my baptism, March 22, 1941 at Czar, Alberta, the hometown of my Grandparents, Hilma & Victor Lindgren. From then on I grew and was nurtured by the “church”. Remember, the church is defined as the people not the building and it was an important part of the lives of the people around me. I remember that my Grandpa rang the church bell every Sunday – one hour before service, again as service began, and then played the organ for the service. In later years, my Uncle Arnold was the bell ringer.

When I was 5 or 6 years old we lived in Edmonton on 95th Street. Across the park was a Lutheran Church and my sister and I went to Sunday School there. I remember telling my mother we couldn't go because we had no offering. Problem solved!! We happily trotted off to Sunday School with two pennies each for offering. Years later at the seminary George Evenson was one of the professors and he remembered those two little girls coming from the other side of the park. He was the pastor of that little church.

Augustana Lutheran became my church home. I attended Sunday school and still have my attendance pin and a crochet cross that I “earned” – maybe for memorizing bible verses. I remember my Dad was an usher for worship services and was involved in the volunteer work of building the “new” church. Mom was often there as well during this time serving meals to the men involved with the building. I sang in the Jr. Choir under the leadership of Helen Pearson. Then there was confirmation – 16 of us – and Pastor Don Sjöberg teaching. I taught Sunday School after I was confirmed. There was Luther League. It was at a youth leadership school that I met Don Bolstad and we began “seeing” each other. Two years later we were married and Pastor Sjöberg officiated at our wedding. When the children started coming they were baptized, attended Sunday school, youth group and grew up in the church.

At our wedding the soloist sang “Whither Thou Goest” and “go” we have. We started our life together in Edmonton, later moved to Hay Lakes, and then New Sarepta where Don taught school. With a sick baby and no doctor in the town we stayed only one year and then moved to Wetaskiwin where Don taught school at Clear Vista for a few years and then one year at Sacred Heart. Pastor Arvidson was the pastor at the Lutheran church here and we renewed our acquaintance. He had previously been Don’s pastor and had encouraged him to consider the ministry. That wasn’t for him – or so he thought. We became involved in the life of Bethlehem Lutheran Church. We led the youth group and I helped in the office when Jim Chell became the pastor. Many a Saturday I would be printing the bulletins on the old gestetner late at night so they’d be ready for service next morning.

All this time God was at work in our lives. Finally Don made the decision that he was ready to answer the call to ministry that had been presented to him many years before. He resigned his teaching job at Sacred Heart and we listed our house for sale. It didn’t sell! Now what? Find a new place to teach. So again we were on the go. This time we landed in Two Hills. No Lutheran church there so we drove to Vegreville to attend worship. Soon we became friends with Pastor Herb Heinneman and his wife Sonja. Often the kids and I stayed with Sonja and their kids while Don went with Herb to his second service. And then the house sold! It was “go” again ... this time to Saskatoon where Don enrolled in the Seminary.

By this time we had 5 kids! But trusting in the goodness of God and his promise to provide we didn't think twice about this move. Don's twin brother, Ronald, helped us move in the grain truck. I was a canner in those days and Ronald thought that my jars should go to the dump along with Don's books. However, the jars and books were saved and found their way to Saskatoon. They were put to good use preserving the bounty from the earth that was shared with the seminary students by the faith community there.

The first year was not a good year for me health wise. I had had surgery in April and June before leaving Two Hills and needed surgery again in November in Saskatoon. Don was told that I had a 30% chance of coming through this last one – but no one shared this with me. Maybe that was a good thing. I came through with flying colours ... maybe not high flying but flying indeed. Again the people of God surrounded us with love and support. One of the professor's wives became my private nurse as I began the recovery process in intensive care. The “Sem” wives helped with childcare and meals for the family, as did the Saskatoon church community. That summer Don was asked to work as caretaker at Mulhurst Camp so we packed up what we needed for the summer and headed west; Don, myself, our 5 kids and an extra. Kevin, our oldest, had a buddy along for company. That little house on the farm was filled with love and laughter. The kids hunted frogs, played in the great outdoors and I healed.

Then it was back to Saskatoon for the second year. Somehow the money ran out before the learning was done. One night when we put the kids to bed there was only enough cereal, milk and bread for the morning. What were we going to do? Pack up and leave? Don find another job? He was already working as well as studying. Questions, questions and seemingly no answers. We went to bed and prayed for God's guidance. The next morning, my friend came over. Her husband was a year ahead of Don at the Seminary. Her mother had died and she had received a little money from the estate. “Here is $500.00,” she said. “I know that about this time we struggled to make ends meet so I want you to have this. Pay me back when you can.”

God was at work in our lives. We had learned to trust in his word – but during times we were struggling, it was hard to do. When Don was in his 3rd year he went into Dr. Hordern's office to withdraw from his studies so he could find a full time job. Dr. Hordern had received some dollars that very morning to help a student in need and was going to call Don. “I can't think of anyone more deserving than you and your family,” he said. Again God's hand was at work. Another lesson in trusting that God is faithful and if we are faithful in a little he is faithful in much. By this time our family had increased by two. We had adopted a couple of girls and were now a family of 7 kids and 2 adults.

Soon it was time to leave Saskatoon. There were those who said, "You'll never get a call with all those kids. No one will want you in a parsonage." (Pastors did not own their own homes in those days.) Don Sjoberg was the bishop/president of the Synod of Alberta now and he told us to come out to Thorsby and take a look. We got there and both Dons shoveled the sidewalk so we could get into the house. A few weeks later we moved and settled in. What a great place to be a beginning pastor. That spring Don was ordained by Don Sjoberg who had been an important part of our family and its faith journey.

Four years later, and 1 kid more, we received and accepted the call to Whitehorse where we stayed for 10 years. Then we went to Terrace BC. By this time our family had increased, as 3 Yukon children joined us. When we left Terrace we had one child more. Other moves found us in Fort McMurray and then Grande Prairie. Whither thou goest.

In all things God has been faithful. There have been good times and there have been sad times. We have buried 4 children. After Terry died, I remember driving down a street in Terrace and Joey, about 7 or 8 years old, noticed the numbers on the houses. He asked what they were for and I told him they were to help us find the house we were looking for. That morning at the worship service one of the lessons had been from John 14 verse 3. "In my Father's house there are many dwelling places." And Joe said, "I hope I can have the place next to Terry". The faith of a little child. We've had a house fire, illness, the trying teenage years to work through, but in all God has been there and so has the community of "the church" ... God's people that impact us on our journey through life. No matter what befalls us in this lifetime if we are open to God's teachings we will see that in all things there is good. This does not mean there will only be roses with no thorns but we will see past the thorns and see the rose for its beauty.

There have been many of God's people who have influenced my life and guided me in my faith. If you look back over your lives, I am sure you will pick out some of the people who have been a great influence on your faith journey as well. Cherish them. They have been in your path for a reason.

First Annual All Synod Program Committee Meeting

On September 13th, the first annual Synod Program Committee Gathering was held at Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd in Red Deer. A number of people from the various Synod Committees met for a broader look at our ministries.

An emphasis was placed on individual committees considering their role in the 2014-2016 Mission Priorities of our Synod: Spirit-led leadership, Hope-filled discipleship, Innovative tradition and Collaborative partnerships.

Canadian Lutheran World Relief: Evening of Hope Celebration

Tom Brook of CLWR addresses the gathering in Edmonton October 7.

Augusta Victoria Hospital (AVH) is a program of the Lutheran World Federation that was established to care for Palestinian refugees after the 1948 war. Today it is moving toward becoming a specialized centre of medical excellence. With 170 beds, AVH is the second-largest hospital in East Jerusalem and is focusing much of its strategic effort on palliative and geriatric care. This is where Canadian Lutheran Relief comes in. As one of their partners in 2009, CLWR was able to help refurbish the third floor long-term care ward and expand it from thirteen beds to twenty-two.

Now there's a new goal. Given an aging population with a high prevalence of chronic illness, coupled with a lack of home-based health care, there is an urgent need for complex geriatric care services and residential care facilities. AVH is requesting support to establish the first elder care and palliative medicine facility to serve Palestinians in East Jerusalem, Gaza and the West Bank. CLWR stepped up to help again.

Bishop Don Sjoberg in conversation during the Edmonton Evening of Hope Celebration.

That's why a series of awareness events took place in the western provinces this fall. Director of community relations, Tom Brook said in Edmonton October 7 and Calgary October 8 that CLWR is looking at raising $2,000,000 over the next 2 – 3 years in Canada. It's off to a good start since in the six months prior to these events, $600,000 was raised. All funds donated to this campaign will be put toward the construction of the Elder Care Pavilion with a total project cost of around $36,000,000.

Should you wish to contribute, you can donate online at www.clwr.org or mail a cheque to CLWR, 600-177 Lombard Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3B 0W5. Please indicate it is for the AVH Elder Care Pavilion.

"We are thankful in the Lords name for all that you do," said Brook.
